

Spatio---temporal Point process models on a global scale

Jun Mikyoung
Texas A&M University, United States – mjun@stat.tamu.edu

Abstract

A flexible Class of models for spatio---temporal point processes on a global scale will be presented. Proposed Model class is able to capture spatio---temporal interaction and nonstationary structure of the processes. Various Fitting methods for the proposed model and computational issues for the large point patterns will be discussed. A Scientific application of proposed models to global lightning occurrences data will be presented.